Dowsers and Developers: the Challenge

Saturday, November 17, 2007

10 am – 3 pm; pot luck lunch. Registration starting at 9:15 am.

Members $3 Nonmembers $6

Leicester Community Center, 2979 New Leicester Hwy (Hwy 63), Leicester NC

Can the perspective of dowsing help land developers in a practical way while advocating for a balanced approach that respects the land and the delicate ecological balance?

All interested persons, including dowsers and especially those involved in land development and planning, are invited to come together for this day of open exploration.

Some of the topics likely to be considered are:

- The facts of water availability and conservation
- Importance of maintaining the delicate ecological balance
- Preservation of sacred sites, natural areas and wildlife
- How dowsers can increase their credibility and influence

Lee Barnes will present a basic introduction to dowsing and will discuss practical aspects of dowsing land parcels. Lee is a water dowser, horticulturalist and real estate agent. He is knowledgeable regarding the scientific study of aquifers and geologic land formations.

Bill Westel is a broker with Eco-Steward Reality in Asheville, which is active in environmentally sustainable, minimal-impact land use in WNC. Bill is active in the WNC Green Builders Council and the online group Digital Dowsing. He has some five years experience in land/energy dowsing. Bill has a special interest in healing land that has been abused in any way.

Richard Crutchfield, president of Appalachian Dowsers, has been dowsing water resources, harmful and benevolent earth energies, sacred sites and elementals for some 18 years. His approach to healing has been greatly influenced by a study of Huna, and his work regarding land use by the indigenous world view. Apart from dowsing well and house sites, his focus has also been on energy clearing and ceremonial work.

The final hour will consist of a panel discussion with the presenters and the audience.

As always, the meeting will be followed by our 1-hour experiential dowsing class outside, for those interested in hands-on instruction.
